Discussing this tendency, The Manufacturers Record very aptly

"Many movements are under way seeking to increase the number of cabinet officers. Some people are cabinet officers. Some people are urging the establishment of a departnent of education, with a cabinet minister, for the purpose of practically dominating the educational interests of the United States. The adoption of that measure would be a disaster to the nation. It would merely intensify the centralized power of the government, which, in trying to shape the education of the country, would have a power for evil impossible to measure. Everything issued by that department would be accepted as law The gathered glory of the May, and gospel by hundreds of thousands The memory of her kiss. of teachers scattered throughout the country, and the influence of such a department could be made to solidify he's just soaked." department could be made to solidify the educational work of this country into any particular line that depart ment desired. "Other suggestions which are being advocated are for a department of good roads and a mining department, both to have members of the cabinet at their heads. Good roads are most important. The mining interest is of great value, but the establishment of new departments to represent them And down in the city, 'mid bustle would be only another move to centralize in Washington departments which would control the building of highways and the mining interests of the country."

With this we heartily agree and believe that a more careful study of the present-day tendency will convince us-especially those of us who instinctively believe in the doctrine of state's rights-that there should be a curtailment rather than an enlargement of federal bureaucracy.

During the many years that she survived Captain Plane, who was killed in the famous battle of Antietam, she planned to keep ever green the memory of the brave soldiers of the gray who made the supreme sacrifice.

She organized the Daughters of the Confederacy in Atlanta, and was for many years the active head. She conceived the idea of a great Confederate memorial on the scarp of Stone Mountain.

She worked incessantly on the fruition of the plan and lived to see the work begun, as she had prayed that she might.

The decision of Berliners to rename one of the principal streets of the great city in honor of President Ebert is meeting with opposition in the country and especially Bavaria, where the right wing politicians, Ebert's opponents, have great influence. The renaming of streets and cities is a tendency which has been growing for the past years. Several of the famous boulevards of Paris were renamed after the war. Avenue Woodrow Wilson and Avenue Victor Emanuel were named in honor of the heads of the American and Italian states. The named in honor of Petrograd from St. Petrersburg and later the other change to ersburg and later the other change to Leningrad is an extreme case. # In Bombardment of Tigers; Conn Gives Up Only 5 Hits

An athletic contest that started as what is commonly known as a base-ball game turned the right ridiculous trick of resolving itself into a nineman one-sided track meet at Grant field yesterday as the Jackets of Georgia Tech knocked the insides out of enough balls pitched by Hughes, Moulton and Austin to win by the score of 25 to 2. No typographical error, folks, it's twenty-five to two, as it is written in the president's best Americanese.

While Hughes and Austin, pitchers by trade at Auburn, and Moulton, who ordinarily works in the outfield, were letting the cohorts of Robert erage, Johnny Conn, Tech pitcher, was letting the Tigers down with five hits. Of the five, Moulton, out five hits. Of the five, Moulton, out-fielder and erstwhile pitcher, knocked three, including the only extra base double, that the Plainsmen smacked.

Johnny Conn had the ball game and the weather his own way. Hot set any college batters down in order. He fanned six of the Plainsmen and refused to give a single base on bills. Conn also did right neat work with the stick, getting two singles and a triple out of five times up.

In Industrial Activities

trial leaders in Wall street expect further slowing down in general trade, it is believed that it will only be a matter of weeks until large domestic consumption corrects existing overproduction. No uneasiness is being felt over the prospects for heavy domestic demand for the longer look ahead. However, many business men are worried over the prospects for profits. For example President Grace of Bethlehem Steel, in publishing the March quarter earnings, said:

"Profits of the steel industry today are not sufficient to cover the investment in the industry; something must happen to bring the margin of profits nearer normal; prices must go up or costs must come down." He added that he did not see how wages could be reduced and in general how costs could be reduced, consequently he expects prifes must be advanced. It is difficult to see how selling prices can be advanced in view of existing over-production resulting from excessive facilities. Hence the outlook for profits in many lines of trade are not encouraging. Sooner or later attention is going to be drawn to the fact that some of our troubles of today are due more to heavy capitalization than to insufficient consumptive demand or high manufacturing costs. There is a temporary slowing down in general trade resulting from wide expectations that lower prices will follow overproduction. Undoubtedly, too, wages and other overproduction. Undoubtedly, too, wages and other overplaced and are high. But despite the slowing demand in this interest of the commanding general trade resulting from wide expectations to commanding generals of all corps area and independent army commands, ordering them trade are not encouraging. Sooner or doubtedly, too, wages and other overhead are high. But despite the slowing down, consumptive demand in this country is still running very large, and if some companies were not so heavily capitalized there would not be heavily capitalized there would not be so many complaints heard regarding small and unsatisfactory profits.

Take Mr. Grace's Bethlehem Steel as an example. In 1913, the year before the war, Bethlehem had outstanding $15,000,000 seven per cent standing $15,000,000 seven per cent stand before the war. Bethlehem had outstanding $15,000,000 seven per cent preferred stock, $15,000,000 selling on the open market as low as $25 ashare and bonds and notes of $33.000,000 making total capitalization $63,000,000. Upper row, left to right: De Luca in one of the three roles he sings in this afternoon's production of "Tales of Hoffmann;" Kathleen Howard, as Nicklausse, in the same offering; Florence Easton, in the title role of tonight's performance of "Tosca," and Martinelli, as Mario, in the same event. Below: Rosa Ponselle, who has recovered from tonsilitis and will sing Santuzza in the specially arranged performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" tonight; Bori, in one of her two roles of "Tales of Hoffmann," and Scotti, in his famous part as Baron Scarpia in "Tosca."

But all week she has been fretting and worrying about her inability to sing. She has been making the life of a famous throat specialist miserable as she begged him to "do something" so that she might go down to the au-

Ponselle Will Sing.

So, for tonight, it has been arranged that two operas will be given, so that Ponselle may sing "Santuzza," in Cavalleria. This is one of her favorite roles and she is going to try, she declares, to sing it so as to make up for all the disappointment her admirers have suffered during the week.

And she will be able to sing, it is narctically certain. For on Friday, the doctor giving his permission, she tried out her voice a little and no woman in the world ever looked greater joy than did Atlanta's Rosa it has been varied enough to suit the greatest range of tastes. The two greatest performances, in popular estimate, have, so far, been the Wednesday night "La Juiva," when Martinelli scored his Atlanta triumph, and Friday when Chaliapin again proved himself a creature almost superhuman in his singing and acting power.

Now, with three operas for a single day, the season will close on a final, Saturday night bill, that it seems probable will outdo all that has gone before.

But, whatever happens today, remember for your old age all that you saw and heard and felt on Friday night. For you witnessed and heard then the utmost in operatic production, a perfect blending of all the arts in an unparalleled perfect whole.

Today's Program Is Opera Climax, States Atkinson

Atlanta's grand opera season rises o a climax today, which without doubt will eclipse in enthusiasm, artistic excellence and sheer entertainment any single day in the history of opera in Atlanta, it was asserted Friday night by H. M. Atkinson, in a statement in behalf of the directors of the Atlanta Music Festival association.

The performance of Offenbach's tuneful "Tales of Hoffmann" this afternoon and the gala double bill of "La Tosca" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" at night, presenting Rosa Ponselle for her only Atlanta appearance, are to be rare opportunities for enjoyment, the director declared.

Singers Enthusiastic. "Never in the history of Metropoli-tan opera in Atlanta has there been more enthusiasm on the part of the singers in efforts to give their best to the public of the city," Mr. Atkinson stated.

"Every singer is presenting not only the routine of his cole but is putting heart and soul into his efforts as never before. The result has been magnificent performances all week with the prospect that the best of the entire week will come Saturday matinee and evening.

"Even off the opera stage the singers are enthusiastically giving of their talents. Only one instance was the ball at the Biltmore hotel Thursday night the Metropolitan chorus.

The stage effects by Joseph Urban are the most magnificent of all stage productions. The hallet combines with the effects to produce the most dramatic pictures any stage ever saw. That scene in Brocken in the second act passes beyond comprehension in its perfect effect of dread and wild horror.

But never forget that the figure that centered all attention every moment he was on the stage, was Chaliapin the supreme. There is no other and there never will be. The magnificences of his voice we know. But still it remains a marvel to talk about when any man by the very magnetism of his presence on the stage, can keep every eye focused on him, whether he sings or is silent, whether others are singing or not. That is the supreme test that Chaliapin meets.

We have had a tremendous week.

SPECTACULAR PRESENTATION OF BOITO'S "MEFISTOFELE" DRAWS BRILLIANT AUDIENCE TO ATLANTA'S AUDITORIUM

Chaliapin Accorded Ovation In Title Role

Boito's allegorical tragedy, "Mefistofele;" drawn from both parts of Goethe's well-known poem, was received by a capacity audience with enthusiastic appreciation Friday evening.

Feador Chaliapin, who is known today as the greatest dramatic singer of all opera and is quite a favorite with Atlanta music lovers, made his only appearance of the season in the title role. As the dominant figure of the performance the great basso received an ovation and, admirably supported by the excellent cast of superb voices, he scored the triumphant success—a success that has been his since, as a youth of 17, he sang the principal bass role in his native Russian opera "Galka-Moninszko," which has made his name a household word through-

No less charming was lovely Frances Alda, another of Atlanta's popular favorites, in the role of Margherita, and Frances Peralta as Elena. Cast in the part of Faust, the character around whom the action of the story revolves, was the sensational young tenor, Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, who sang his way into the hearts of southern opera lovers when he made his debut in Atlanta Monday evening in the performance of "La

THE FIRST BOSS.

The afternoon of Jane's first encounter with Armstrong, the president of the firm, had been a particularly trying one. She had been given a piece of copying which required extreme accuracy. It contained briess and invoices and her inexperience made her progress slow and painful. Since no erasures were allowed, she was forced to remove sheet after sheet of paper from her machine, throw them in the waste basket and start all over again.

She was flushed and tired and discouraged. Moreover the past weeks of steady unaccustomed work leaning over a machine in a not-too-well ventilated office had told on her. A little nerve on the buck of her neck throbbed persistently with the sharpness and polgnancy of a toothache. Even her shoulders ached, but she kept on doggedly.

When Armstrong came to the office and stopped at her deak, she did not even lift her gaze.

Quite undaunted, he beamed down apon her benighly. He was a tall man, corpulent and prosperous looking. A fringe of sandy hair encircled his pink, shining, bald head. He had a drooping sandy mustache and his evelids, fringed with sandy lashes, drooped also over pale, slightly fishy eyes. He had a reputation which

"Of course this work you are doing now is very stupid, but there are much more interesting jobs around the office. Presume you are ambitious to be more than a copyist."

Jane nodded.

"When I am qualified, I shall exexpect something better."

He chuckled.

"You are the first young lady I've talked to here who did not ask for the best job in the place the minute she came in. They all think they are qualified to be the head stenographer as soon as they leave school—will you come in my private office for a few minutes, I want to talk to you?"

Jane hesistated a moment; then she shrugged inperceptibly, set her chin a bit defiantly and followed him into the office which bore the word: "president."

Supreme Court Ruling.

The higher court held that, under the laws of Idaho, a petitioner must appeal to the courts of that state to fix homestead exemption rights. Judge Sibley holds that laws in this state differ from those in Idaho to such an extent that it is not necessary to go before Georgia courts.

Specific cases on which the ruling by Judge Sibley was based are the petitions of John P. Trammell and the Miller Shoe company, Referee K. R. Jones, of Dawson, ruled that Trammell would have to go to the courts of the state in order to get the benefits of the homestead exemption a bankrupt is allowed by the United States court. Judge Sibley overuled this contention.

Plans for a state conference of chairmen of the Woodrow Wilson Memorial college movement in Atlanta, May 6, were formed at a meeting Friday afternoon of a group of Atlanta business and professional men at the Piedmont hotel.

The preliminary conference was called by Eugene R. Black, Major John S. Cohen, T. C. Erwin, Dr. M. Ashby Jones and Bolling Jones, to outline definite steps in raising Atlanta's share of the million dollars Georgia is to raise for the memorial project.

Optimism pervaded the statements of those who attended the meeting. John R. Slater, mayor of Douglas, Ga., attended the meeting of the Atlanta group and expressed the enthusiasm which is prevalent in south Georgia over the new college.

Mayor Slater Speaks.

"Always in the past the people of south Georgia have been asked to contribute money for the good of the state as a whole or for educational institutions located in north Georgia," said Mayor Slater. "Now we have a chance to help promote Georgia's and for the college Atlantas Lauded.

"The Woodrow Wilson college project is finding some real friends here in Atlanta, said Mr. Mizell. "The state chairman, has called to meet in Atlanta will do much to organize this support strongly behind the undertaking. At that time it is expected that 50 outstanding Georgians representing all of the twelve congressional districts will come to Atlanta to meet with the Atlanta committee and complete a working program for mobilizing Wilson's admirers in every county and town in Georgia. Colonel Edward town in Georgia will get behind the proposition sincerely and enthusiastically. Their offer is somewhat in the nature of a challenge unqualifiedly, and when such men start something it is pretty certain that it will be carried through."

"Now we have a chance to help promote Georgia's educational facilities by building a new college, first-class in every respect, which will be located in our own section of the country and thus immediately accessible to the hundreds of south Georgia boys who are graduating from our high schools down there each year. At last south Georgia is to have its own college for men, an institution which will bear the name of not only Georgia's greatest citizen but one of the world's greatest leaders. We are mighty proud that Georgia is to have Woodrow Wilson college and particularly glad that it is to be erected in our own section of the state," he concluded.

MERCER DEFEATS OGLETHORPE TEAM IN ANNUAL DEBATE

Macon, Ga., April 24.—(Special.)
Mercer university's debating team won a two to one decision from Oglethorpe university debaters tonight on the subject, "Resolved, That Capital Punishment Is a Wise Public Pelicy." Capital punishment, or the affirmative side of the question, was upheld by two ministerial students of Mercer, Hillyer H. Straton, of New York, and son of Dr. John Roach Straton, once debating champion of the south when he was a Mercer student, and Adiel J. Moncrief. of Decatur, Ga. B. C. Yates, of Adrian, Ca., and Mitchell C. Bishop, of Asheville, N. C. represented Oglethorpe on the nactive side.

The affirmative contended that the average life imprisonment term is only eight years and therefore is not a deterrent of crime, but that the fear of death halts criminal inroads. The Ozlethorpe speakers, on the negative side, argued that the death penalty is not a crime deterrent as proven by ancient English history when death was the penalty for even petty misdemeanors.

Mercur foreasie teams have went Oldest Central Employee sity teams of Auburn, Florida, and Oglethorpe.

On May 8 a triangular affair between Mercer, Georgia Tech and the University of Alahema will take place on the subject: "Resolved, That the Federal Constitution Should Be So Amended As To Provide For Child Labor."
